

Ethics, CSR, and Sustainability: An Aristotelian Vision, Mission, and Strategy for the Global Economy and a Sustainable Planet By Christos Papoutsy

“Ethics, CSR, & Sustainability” is a practical guide to business ethics, offering advice on everything from choosing a board and installing sound oversight practices, to being a good environmental neighbor.

The book illustrates how Classical philosophies and the spirit of Eudaimonia can be incorporated into corporate principles. It also examines the issues facing companies today, and provides fact-based guidance on how to develop an ethical, socially-responsible company that is committed to sustaining the planet.

About the Author: Christos Papoutsy is a successful, semi-retired business executive. During his career, Mr. Papoutsy led thousands of employees world-wide and developed his company into a global leader in the electronics industry. He is a business graduate of Southern New Hampshire University, and he later pursued post-degree studies at Harvard University in law, mediation, and psychology. In 1991, he received an honorary Doctor of Law degree from his alma mater. Mr. Papoutsy has lectured on business and business ethics at universities and educational institutions in Europe, and the United States, including Oxford University, Dartmouth College, the University of New Hampshire, Southern New Hampshire University, and The American Hellenic Chamber of Commerce in Athens, Greece. Christos Papoutsy is a former mediator and director of United States Arbitration & Mediation of New England, Inc. Many of his lectures on mediation and business ethics are available to the public through Hellenic Communication Services at <http://www.helleniccomserve.com>. With his wife, he is founder of the Christos and Mary Papoutsy Distinguished Chair in Ethics at Southern New Hampshire University (www.snhu.edu).
